All Hallow's Eve is a supernatural holiday. Traditionally, it is a time of the dead. It is believed that the dead come back to earth on this night. But if you are not a fan, but it is a night that involves the frightful and the macabre. So sometimes it turns out to be are antisocial, but generally accepted, according to Dr. David Weight, assistant professor of psychology. He said people can justify pranks on Halloween because they are socially sanctioned.

The holiday has evolved from a Scottish-Irish religious festival. Anciently, the Celts celebrated a feast for their god of the dead on Nov. 1. The festival of the dead eventually became incorporated into Christian ritual.

In the 19th Century, a feast in honor of all saints (all hallow) was fixed on Nov. 1. So Halloween celebrated the eve of the festival of those who had died the previous year.

During Medieval times and later, Europeans believed elves, fairies and witches (who could also take the shape of cats) flew abroad on All Hallow's Eve. Bonfires were lit to ward off these spirits.

Senate fight expected on N.Y. aid bill

By MIKE WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee approved Thursday a $4 billion loan guarantee bill for New York City, but the Ford administration reaffirmed its opposition to providing federal aid for the financially stricken city.

The bill faces a threatened filibuster on the Senate floor and a probable presidential veto if it survives House and Senate opposition.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, appearing before a House economic stabilization subcommittee, said New York City had not exhausted all possible sources of cash to stave off bankruptcy.

Simon suggested emergency funds be obtained by raising the state sales tax from 8 to 11 per cent or borrowing money against municipal pension funds—proposals under consideration by Albany leaders.

In Los Angeles, Ford told reporters the New York crisis should be a warning to all municipalities to manage their affairs properly.

The loan guarantee was approved in the Senate committee by an 8 to 5 vote. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., was the lone Democrat to vote against it and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the only Republican to vote for it. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., reminded the committee of Ford's statement Wednesday that he would veto any "bail-out" or loan guarantee to prevent New York City from defaulting on its obligations.

"The fact is," Tower said, "there ain't gonna be no loan guarantee legislation. You can talk about the horrors and gloom of default all day but the fact is the city's going to default."

Tower said the committee should be doing something to help New York instead of considering the measure by Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill.

Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., told Tower it has "been no secret that the President would veto this legislation..."

"It's not the threat of a veto, Tower said. "It's what you can get through the Senate... There's bipartisan opposition."

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., said "there is absolutely no possibility of overriding a presidential veto."

Brooke asked the committee to consider a substitute which would eliminate loan guarantees and provide instead a direct $3 billion loan to the city to maintain essential services and issue federally guaranteed debt certificates in the event the city defaults.

Brooke's motion was defeated 7 to 6.

Computer may aid ASBYU officers

By JOHN GIBBS
Universe Staff Writer

A group of BYU computer science students will undertake a study to analyze the feasibility of computerizing the flow of funds from the $250,000 ASBYU budget.

The four members of the team are enrolled in Computer Science 451. They will study all the policies and procedures which affect the ASBYU financial system.

Keith Jepsen, a member of the study group, said that the study will be in the form of a systems analysis. "We are not even sure our recommendations will involve a computer package. We may also suggest changes in form or procedure," he said.

ASBYU Financial Vice President Jim Pedersen suggested the study in an attempt to analyze the effectiveness of student government activities. "This is an attempt by ASBYU to look at itself, to try to improve," he said.

Pedersen also indicated that the study would provide information never before obtained. He said the study will consist of three essential parts.

The team will first analyze the organizational and power structure of the student government organization. It will next provide a map of the present financial flow system, identifying problems and weaknesses.

The final stage will be the development of an ideal system. At this point the feasibility of a computer package will be assessed, and the appropriate changes implemented.

Pedersen said that his experience in the Financial Office last year convinced him that there should be a better way to handle the financial operation of ASBYU funds.

Members of the study team are Jim Johnson, Hal Shearer, Keith Jepsen and Mike Ard, chairman.

Provoans won't vote on transit

Provo citizens won't be faced with the decision to approve or reject mass transit this election. The question won't be on the Nov. 4 ballot.

City Commissioner Odell Miner told the Daily Universe the transit needs of most segments of the population are currently being met. Miner said that if conditions change, the City Commission can reassess the situation before the next election.

"Our present bus line is serving the needs of the people pretty well," he said. Miner added that while senior citizens groups favored the mass transit proposal, they already have a busing program which is federally funded.

Miner explained that the decision last month by Orem City not to include mass transit on its ballot had little effect upon Provo's decision.

Vandals shoot up cars

When residents in west Orem woke Thursday morning, many of them found their car windows had been shot out during the night.

Between 60 and 70 cars in Orem and about 24 cars in Provo were reported to the Orem and Provo police to have been damaged during the night. A bus from the Alpine School District also had 13 of its windows shattered.

"We believe it was a group of youths in a car with high-powered air guns" who did the vandalism, said Orem Police Chief James A. Simmons. He claimed it is the most serious act of vandalism that has happened in this area in a number of years.

The school bus was parked on 400 West in Orem, and most of the damaged cars were on the west side of Orem from 1200 South to 800 North. Cars on the east side of Orem were also reported vandalized on 600 and 800 North.

Simmons said the Orem Police are checking a few leads, but he declined to indicate what these leads are. "We are working the high schools now to see if we can turn up more information about the prank," he said.

Simmons urged citizens to contact the police department if they had noticed any suspicious cars or activities early Thursday morning, especially in the areas vandalized.

The incidents of vandalism in Provo were more scattered throughout the city, according to Provo police. At least two-dozen incidents were reported in Provo.

Provo police also found a B-B next to a vandalized auto. A high-powered air rifle would have been needed to shoot out the tempered glass in the autos, commented Simmons. "We don't know whether air rifles or pistols were used," he added.

BYU Security said no reports were called in to them Thursday about car vandalism.

Concert schedule runs into conflicts

The ASBYU Social Office concerts scheduled for February and March 1976 will not be held in the Marriott Center. The Social Office had assumed that the Marriott Center would be available because such concerts have traditionally been there, according to Dan Morgan, Social Office vice president.

The Marriott Center will not be available because of other activities that had been previously scheduled. These activities include basketball games, high school basketball tournaments and the rehearsals and performances of the Centennial play, "Brigham."

Morgan said that all other activities sponsored by the Social Office will still be presented and that negotiations for possible times for these February and March concerts are being held.

"I am concerned about the concert program and I hope that the students' interests will be of the most importance," commented Morgan.

discounts given by the d the price markups products. Consequently, ust make up for the loss according to Madsen.

"So all of these discounts are being subsidized by student purchases," he said.

The bookstore is operating on a 23 per cent overhead or operating cost. He said that if the university paid the discounts, the operating cost would be lower and the bookstore could lower its prices.

Since the discounts are an employee benefit, the subsidy for the discounts should be paid through the Employee Benefits Office, he said.

"We don't want to let the students pay for employee benefits in the bookstore," he said.

Jim Pedersen, ASBYU financial vice president and chairman of the investigative subcommittee, said that the bookstore is a free enterprise which operates financially independent of the rest of the university.

"If we were to implement university funds, we would be taking tithing dollars and using them to subsidize the discounts," he said.

Reduces profit

Pedersen, a member of the bookstore board of directors, said the process of giving the discount involves making less of a profit from faculty and staff than the profit made from the students.

The bookstore operates to cover its cost and make a slight profit. This profit is a reduced one when compared to similar businesses, Pedersen added.

Madsen said that his investigators will first seek cooperation with the bookstore so that more information can be gathered. Next, Financial Services will be contacted to see what steps can be taken to subsidize the discounts from some other source.

Commissioner, auditor

Provo to elect officials

By JOHN WISE
Universe Staff Writer

Provo voters must decide Tuesday who they want as their representatives on the city commission and in the city auditor's post for the next four years.

For the office of city auditor, incumbent H. Blaine Hall and Stanley C. DeFriez will face each other. And for the city commission, incumbent M. Wayne Hillier will be challenged by retired regional post-office director J. Earl Wignall.

By going to the polls Provo citizens will, in effect, decide the issues Provo will face for the next four years.

Blaine Hall

Provo's current auditor, Blaine Hall, said not many people know what the job of city auditor entails. As well as auditing the city's budget, Hall said, the auditor must make an account of the city's funds, prepare financial statements and advise the commission on financial matters and bonding.

A more accurate name for the auditor's responsibilities would be "financial director," Hall said. He said state law provides that all cities with commission-type governments must have an independent auditor, hence the term "city auditor."

Hall noted that although the auditor has no vote in the city commission, he can advise members of the commission on financial matters.

He said he is running for his third term because he wants to help the city prepare a realistic budget within a reasonable tax structure so

Provo won't over-extend itself financially.

Stanley C. DeFriez, his opponent, Stanley C. DeFriez, said he takes issue with Hall mostly in the fact that he is running for his third term.

"An auditor must be rotated often in order to have the most objective audit performed each year," DeFriez said. "That is why the State Auditor may not succeed himself."

DeFriez said it is easy for an auditor to fall into a rut if he audits the same material year after year.

Hall responded that the auditor's post involves much more than auditing, which is why he feels the name of the post should be changed. Hall said he agrees auditors should be rotated often, only if their position is purely auditing. DeFriez noted that the auditor's only responsibility to the city treasurer is how city funds are invested and to suggest ways the money could be invested differently. He claimed that Hall had gone beyond his legal duty and directed the treasurer to invest city money in a certain way.

DeFriez said that during the last month he has stepped up his campaign through newspaper ads, lawn signs, brochures and spot ads on the radio. I have no idea whether I will win or not, but "I believe I have a good chance," he said.

Earl Wignall

In the commission race, Earl Wignall considers the most important and pressing issue in Provo's future is to attract industry and keep the money from leaving Provo for

Orem 3 run on Peoples ticket

Orem City has three men running for City Council on the Peoples Party ticket.

Wayne Watson

"Wayne Watson feels he is running an unusual campaign in Orem. I'm going door to door to meet the public, get ideas and feel the concern of the people for Orem City's government."

Watson, 30, is employed by the Utah County Attorney's office and the law firm of Jackman, Crosby and Sunberg.

He will receive his law degree from BYU in December. He says he feels two issues are important: the lack of communication among employees of the city government and the new pornography ordinance.

"I would hope to establish inroads of communication between Orem's citizens and city employees to the City Council," Watson said. "Department supervisors should be permitted to carry out their policies with little interference from the City Council."

On pornography, he said, "The Supreme Court has interpreted the constitution to say each local community shall govern its own standards. Orem's new city ordinance on pornography should be enforced."

Russel Heaton

Orem has three major problems, says Russel Heaton, another candidate for Orem City Council.

These problems, he said, are Orem's water situation, the city workers' job dissatisfaction and lack of a city wide youth program.

3 Oremites on Citizens ticket

By LARRY CRAGUN
Universe Staff Writer

Three Citizens Party candidates are running for the Orem City Council. They are: J. LeRoy Walker, Lee Bamgartner, and Glen Zimmerman.

J. LeRoy Walker

It is important for Orem to keep a team together in the City Council, said J. LeRoy Walker, Citizens Party candidate seeking re-election to that office.

He added, "It's just as important for that team to determine what actions will be taken to keep the city united."

Walker said he has done many things he promises to do when elected. "I am concerned about what the Orem citizens want and have personally had two surveys done by BYU students to get residents reactions to city policies.

Walker, who heads the Division of Media Design and development at BYU, said he has helped Orem maintain the way of life citizens want.

Three areas he said he headed in are: getting a paramedic team operational in Orem, giving each officer on the police force a car as a deterrent to crime and assisting with changes in the garbage collection system.

Walker feels he would continue to do what he believes is best for the city by continued study and being responsible for "my own actions."

Lee Bamgartner

Lee Bamgartner, also running for Orem City Council on the Citizens Ticket, is concerned about preserving the home from encroachments that are coming upon it.

"Orem needs orderly growth and planning of key concepts to determine what our future is going to be," he said. Bamgartner feels three major issues to be considered will be: increased need for water, sewage removal and social services demanded.

Bamgartner, who runs the Provo Office of Boley Realty, says with inflation like it is, "The skyrocketing dollar must be spent all the more wisely in order to give the family adequate protection from crime, fire and so on."

Orem recently passed one of the most effective decency laws in the nations, Bamgartner said. He feels there are going to be forces in the area that will test this law and a city councilman should be elected who could work against the encroachments to this law.

Bamgartner says a councilman should be free to serve according to the dictates of his own conscience, keeping in mind the desires of the public as well as the responsibilities of the facts toward any issue.

Glen Zimmerman

"Two of the issues facing us in this election are Orem's proposed water treatment plant and continued advance city planning."

This is the opinion of Glen Zimmerman, Citizens Party candidate for the Orem City Council. Zimmerman, who is seeking re-election to the four-year post, is assistant principal of Orem Junior High School.

According to Zimmerman, Orem has enough ground water to serve over 180,000 people and because of over 2,000 homes pending that haven't broken ground, Orem is planning to build its own treatment plant to purify available water. "Hopefully the project will be in and operating within five years," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman says, Orem has adopted a new five-year plan to increase water supplies, BYU Executive approved at its today a proposal Social Office policies for and reporting that office's financial status.

The proposal, presented by Dan Morgan, Social Office vice president, requires that five regular reports be made on the Social Office's financial affairs.

According to the approved proposal, the office will submit budget breakdowns for both major and small accounts to the Executive Council.

The Social Office will present a financial status report to the Executive Council each month, Morgan said.

One or two times per month, a representative from the ASBYU Finance Office will audit the Social Office's financial records, Morgan said.

According to the final section of the proposal, the Social Office will report to the Executive Council any proposed projects or expenditures which could affect the council.

Budget and financial earnings reports will be made in general terms, Morgan said. His office could be more effective if it worked under a loose budget. He said social offices at other universities are often forced into mediocrity by constraints of tight budgets.

Curt Wylder, assistant director of the Wilkinson Center, advised the council that exact figures of concert costs and profits must be kept confidential. He said the Social Office could report if and how much it is in the red or black, but that disclosure of costs or of receipts from concerts is inappropriate.

The council also assigned a subcommittee, headed by Finance Vice President Jim Pedersen, to further investigate bookstore policies. The subcommittee will give special attention to accusations that faculty-staff discounts are being paid for by revenues from sales to students.

Steve Madsen, ASBYU Ombudsman, said the discounts constitute employee benefits and that he thinks they should be paid for by the University Benefits Office. The subcommittee will seek to determine the score of funds covering the discounts.

In other action the council approved an expenditure proposal presented by Scott Earnshaw, vice president of Freshmen Involvement. The proposal provides $445 of the Freshmen Involvement Office's funds for the upcoming Missionary Preparation Conference.

Bob Henrie, ASBYU president, instructed the council to prepare for a Student Forum on Title IX of the Higher Education Act. Henrie said he hopes the forum would be conducted next week but that it was impossible to make definite plans now.

Centennial Celebrities

After Benjamin Cluff, Jr., on Dec. 23, 1903, resigned as BYU president, a note was found in his office wastebasket when his papers were being collected for the archives.

Written in pencil and titled "Teacher's Virtues," Pres. Cluff had outlined four qualities essential to teaching:

"1. Patience, kindness, long-suffering, firmness, consistency, regularity, courtesy."

"2. All students, even the poorest, have a right to the kindly attention and good will of the teacher. They have a right to a teacher's time, to his aid, to his affection; they have a right to be treated as ladies and gentlemen."

"3. The following questions should always be in the mind of the teacher: (1) How can I best present this subject to the class? (2) How can I arouse the latent powers of the dull student?"

"4. An easy but false solution of the 'bad student' problem, is to expel the student from the school. A hard but true solution is to arouse him to activity, - to 'doctor him up'."

Born in Provo on Feb. 7, 1858, Cluff entered the academy in 1877, and in October 1878, became the school's first student to be called on a full-time mission for the church.

He became the school's assistant principal in 1890, serving under Karl G. Maeser. On Jan. 4, 1892, he became the principal of the academy.

During his tenure as assistant principal and then as principal, the academy saw numerous innovations: Founder's Day was celebrated on Oct. 16, 1891. Classes were changed from the traditional half-hour period to a one hour duration. The Student's Loan Association was organized. The academy was incorporated as a church school on July 18, 1896.

Backache, just a pain in neck?

Question: Periodically I get a lower backache, especially after riding in a car for several hours. Is this anything serious?

Answer: This is probably not serious and represents only fatigue of the back muscles. In a young person, who experiences lower backache only after prolonged sitting, standing or unaccustomed use of the back muscles, this is the most likely diagnosis.

However, low back pain may also be something more serious, an orthopedic or medical problem, especially if it is prolonged. For instance, a degenerated intervertebral disc, partial dislocation of one of the joints of the spine or arthritis of the spine will also cause backache.

People who have an increased curvature of the lower back, called a sway back or lordosis, are more susceptible to back strain than a person with a comparatively straight back.

Here is some simple advice on how to avoid tiring back muscles. Even ordinary standing, sitting and lying in bed can strain the spine, if not done properly. It is most important to avoid any posture that tends to increase sway back.

1—During prolonged standing, one of the hips should be flexed by placing one foot on a stool or a step.

2—Never lean forward without bending the knees, especially when lifting a heavy object.

3—Do not lift anything heavy above your waist.

4—Do not sleep on your abdomen because this position tends to increase arching of the lumbar spine and puts strain on the back muscles. Recommended positions are lying on one's side with hips and knees bent or lying on one's back with hips and knees flexed and a support under the knees.

5—When sitting in a chair, it is advisable to have one or both knees higher than the hips and also have a good back support and armrest.

Work cutback to force Geneva employe layoff

Reductions in steelmaking and finishing operations at U.S. Steel's Geneva plant will result in a layoff of an estimated 200 employees this weekend.

A lack of steel demand by the western market is causing the reduction, local company officials confirmed Thursday. One of four open-hearth furnaces will be shut down, according to Dave Bigler, director of public affairs, U.S. Steel's Mountain States District.

More than 500 employees will be laid off at the plant after the weekend reductions. Approximately 4,000 employees will remain on the job, however. U.S. Steel officials say the decline for steel may be partly seasonal during the fourth quarter.

Broadcaster tells of crisis in India

By RICHARD G. WILKINS
Universe Staff Writer

The role of a free press is to tell the emperor when he has no clothes on, said Richard Threlkeld, CBS News correspondent, at Thursday's World Issues Symposium.

Speaking of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's seizure of dictatorial control in India, Threlkeld outlined the effects of the failure of India's democracy had on its press and the implications the crisis has for the world at large.

The CBS correspondent who covered the fall of Cambodia and Saigon and currently is covering the Patty Hearst story, Threlkeld covered India's crisis or five weeks, arriving in India soon after Mrs. Gandhi declared India to be in a state of emergency.

"Democracy was born in India in 1947, was weak and sickly from birth, and was murdered in 1975 by Indira Gandhi," said Threlkeld.

Mrs. Gandhi's "murder" entailed the imprisonment of an estimated 60,000 political opponents, the creation of a police state and the destruction of one of the world's "liveliest free presses," said Threlkeld.

The crisis began last spring. Mrs. Gandhi was convicted of illegal campaign procedures. Soon the press and political critics were calling for her resignation.

"Unlike Watergate, the India crisis never got to a 'Saturday Night Massacre' or 18-minute gaps in tapes," said Threlkeld. "Instead she changed the rules of the game," he said.

Declared emergency

Mrs. Gandhi felt the greatest threat to her power was criticism by political opponents and the press, so she invoked Section 352 of the Indian Constitution and created a national state of emergency.

"This in effect nullified the Indian Bill of Rights," said Threlkeld, "and buried democracy."

"They imposed the stiffest censorship I've seen," said Threlkeld. Everything had to pass through the government censors.

Threlkeld said that after 8 a.m. each day his crews were followed and out-of-country telephone calls were recorded, so he had to leave for filming and to telephone calling early in the morning.

Wrote two scripts

In order to get factual reports it was necessary to make two scripts for filmed reports, said Threlkeld.

One report was sent to the censor, while the actual

Here's list of frightful pleasures tonight

Leaving past thrills of candy collecting behind, many BYU students seem eager to participate in a more mature celebration of the spirit of Halloween—getting their socks scared off.

Several campus organizations and local businesses are obliging by supplying the students with fright, the pleasure of the season.

Halloween celebrates a human paradox—the joy of spooking and being spooked. The English poet Thomas Gray expressed the mortal quirk, "They hear a voice in every wind, and snatch a fearful joy."

Opportunities are plentiful for students seeking scares in the area this Halloween.

Spook alleys

Tonight's Spook Alley sponsored by the ASBYU Social Office has been moved from the Skyroom to 109 and 110 ELWC, according to Dan Morgan, Social Office vice president.

Admission is free. The event will last from 9 p.m. to midnight.

In Provo, two spook houses will open to the public. One, sponsored by KEYY radio, will be in a 107-year-old house located at 750 S. 1100 West. The other will be hosted by the Utah State Hospital and the March of Dimes in the old castle on the State Hospital grounds.

Last year, 3,000 people went through the KEYY haunted house, and expectations this year are higher. "It's going to be a lot scarier than it was last year," said Ken Merrell, one of the leaders of Explorer Post 758, which puts together and mans the spook show. Cost for admission is $1.

The spook house will run from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. through Nov. 1. It offers horror movies nightly, and additional "surprises" besides the haunted house.

Frightful flicks

Two campus movies will cater to the spooky set.

The Varsity Theater will show "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte," a 1964 film about an aged southern plantation, an eccentric spinster who lives there and the murder of her married lover, unsolved for 37 years but chillingly resolved by the film's end. Stars are Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Joseph Cotten and Agnes Moorehead.

The Weekend Movie will feature a 1935 horror classic, "Mark of the Vampire." Starring Lionel Barrymore and Bela Lugosi, it deals with a strange murder in a Czech village.

Other local theaters will show special Halloween flicks—"Count Yorga, Vampire" at the Fox, "Race with the Devil" at the Uintah, "Beyond the Door" at the Academy, "Wuthering Heights" at the Villa, and a triple horror show—"Race with the Devil," "Hell House," and "Rasputin, the Mad Monk" at the Art City Drive-in.

At home

One need not even leave his home to receive a good dose of horror. "Son of Frankenstein," a 1939 standard starring Boris Karloff and Boris Karloff will be shown at 11:30 p.m. on channel 4.

Smaller groups are likely to find fright by turning down the lights and telling grotesque stories. Tales like "Fall of the House of Usher,"

"The Tell-tale Heart," or any of several other stories by Edgar Allan Poe are but a few of the best (or worst) of the thousands of references available.

Perhaps like beauty, horror is not just skin deep. But several local stores are stocking cosmetics that could make the most pretty exterior look frightful. Leora

Higgins, a clerk at a local store, reported sales of vampire blood scar tissue, and fangs are doing particularly well this year.

With such cooperation from organizations and businesses both on and off campus, Provo will be a fine setting for students seeking to "snatch a fearful joy" tonight.

Oaks urges Telefund support

Pres. Dallin H. Oaks urged an open letter to BYU students Thursday urging them to donate to the Telefund campaign now underway. He suggested that students who are able should contribute $4 per semester or $8 for the school year. Money collected in the Telefund effort goes to help pay for the new addition to the library.

The Text of Pres. Oaks' letter read: I am pleased to inform you that the construction of the addition to the Harold B. Lee Library is proceeding as scheduled and is due to be completed October 15, 1976.

In the past, all BYU academic buildings have been entirely financed by the church. But when the decision was made to add to our Library, the Board of Trustees adopted for the first time a plan whereby church, alumni, friends, BYU faculty and staff and students would combine to finance the needed construction.

Since that decision was made in 1971, thousands of students have contributed their time and money to raising over $250,000.

Support 'Telefund' It now remains for the students of BYU to complete their chosen goal of between $500,000 and $1 million dollars. One way in which that may be accomplished is through the Student Development Association's 'Telefund' beginning November 4, 1975. Last year over $65,000 worth of pledges were made and I am informed that a goal of $100,000 has been set for this year.

This telefund has my complete approval and support. I urge each student to support it with a contribution. I also commend each of you who are volunteering to assist in making calls. Without your efforts, Telefund would be impossible. Although I realize student funds are limited, I suggest, as I have in the past, that each student contribute at least one dollar for each month of current enrollment at BYU, which will be $14 per semester of $8 for the conventional school year.

Call parents If this is too much for an individual student's circumstances, I hope he or she will contribute whatever is possible. I hope each student will make some contribution to our library fund. One other way in which students can help accumulate the Telefund goal of $100,000 is by calling their parents. May I suggest that those of you whose parents might be in a position to contribute, call your parents from the Alumni House.

Y to spoil Wildcats' chances?

By GERRY McKISSICK
Universe Sports Writer

It's a "do or die" situation for the Wildcats of Arizona Saturday afternoon when the face the Cougars.

The "must" contest will begin at 1:30 p.m. at Cougar Stadium. Arizona was undefeated until last week's 44-34 loss to New Mexico at Tucson, and its defense had given up only 34 points in five games.

But AU's defense fell apart last week, and the loss put Arizona at a disadvantage in the battle for the WAC crown. Until that time, it was a close race with Arizona State, with both teams consistently in the national rankings.

Now Arizona has dropped to 16th nationally, and ASU is up to No. 10. Standing 4-0 in WAC play, the Sun Devils have their foot half way in the Fiesta Bowl door.

After Saturday's game with BYU, Arizona must still face Colorado State, Utah and Arizona State and beat them all in order to come in first place.

The Sun Devils have an easier schedule, facing basement-dwellers Utah and Wyoming prior to the showdown with the Wildcats on their own field.

Tough game

The Cougars are working on a three-game winning streak. But Coach LaVell Edwards says he expects the game "to be a tough one."

Associated Press has given Arizona a 10-point edge. Last year, the Cougars went to Tucson an 18-point underdog. At that time, the Wildcats were leading the WAC with a 3-0 record, followed closely by BYU at 2-0-1.

Despite the odds, the Cougars mauled the Wildcats, 37-13.

Nevertheless, Edwards is wary. "They have an excellent football team, and coupled with the fact that they got beat last weekend, it puts their backs against the wall."

Back-to-back league losses at Colorado State and Arizona State have spoiled the Cougars' hopes for a repeat appearance in the Fiesta Bowl.

But the Cougars have revised their goals.

"First is to ruin Arizona's championship dreams for the second straight year," Edwards said. "Another is to extend our winning streak to eight by the end of the season."

Stan Warner
... quarterback sacker

The Cougars go into the fray with a 6-9-1 series record against the Wildcats. To add another win to the total, they will have to concentrate on stopping senior quarterback Bruce Hill.

Hill, total offense leader in the WAC with a 205.2 average per game, is a double threat, running the quarterback option almost every play.

Arizona's offense has averaged 28.8 points per game, with the defense giving up just 13. BYU's offense has generated 19.2 points per game, giving up 18.8.

Arizona's problem

Arizona will have the headache of stopping one of the WAC's leading rushers, Jeff Blanc.

Blanc is now averaging 126.3, which makes him the top non-kicking scorer in the conference with 42 points.

"There's no question that Jeff will be the best back in BYU's history. He's establishing the fact right now. He's not as big as Pete Van Valkenburg, but he's quicker. Eldon Fortie was quicker than Jeff, but Jeff's bigger, so he's a kind of a combination of the two," said Edwards.

Arizona will not be able to deploy all of its defensive players in an effort to stop Blanc, however. It will need some to defend against Gifford Nielsen.

Nielsen, in four games, is averaging 143.5 yards in the air, with a 60.7 passing percentage average. In order to win, Arizona will have to stop them both.

Quarterback Gifford Nielsen lets fly a pass to split end Jeff Nilsson in a recent contest.

The Cougars rushed for 398 yards against Wyoming, almost 250 yards more than their season average of 166 yards rushing per game.

Tailback Jeff Blanc picked up the lion's share of that total, gaining 215 yards on 36 carries, one carry short of the BYU record of 37 set by ex-cougar great Pete Van Valkenburg against Utah in 1967.

The Cats didn't rattle-dazzle the opposition. They stuck to the basics. As Coach Edwards said, "We used an inside trap play - we've used it before - it's not a new play, just a good solid play off a very basic formation."

The Cougars put the "trap" into their game plan especially for the Cowboys. "Wyoming uses a four-three defensive alignment like we do," said Edwards, "only they set theirs up a little different."

Quarterback Gifford Nielsen fakes a pitch-out to the fullback, pivots, and hands off to tailback Jeff Blanc who runs through the hole over right guard and traps him out of the play.

"Brad Oates, our right tackle will take out the linebacker, as will the tight end Brian Billick," he added. "The defensive end is out of the play because we faked the pitch-out to the fullback - this will hold both the end and the cornerback because if they don't take the fake, then we can get to the outside the second they move in, and we'll be able to run wide on them."

The four main blocks were thrown by center Orrin Olsen Billick, Oates and Miller. Besides his running ability,

Royals file suit in court to test reserve clause

KANSAS CITY (AP) - The Kansas City Royals have gone to court to halt a challenge of major league baseball's reserve clause, but the head of the players' association said Wednesday the suit had "no merit whatsoever."

The Royals filed suit Tuesday in U.S. District Court seeking to prohibit the Major League Baseball Players Association from submitting the cases of two National League pitchers to arbitration.

A motion asking to intervene on behalf of the American League's Royals was filed in court Wednesday by the 23 other major league clubs.

Tunas sandwich No. 1 team with thirteen-point spread

No. 1-ranked Los Bravos lost by 13 points to Wild Tunas, the No. 3-ranked team, Wednesday night in coed basketball.

"We choked in the fourth quarter. We couldn't buy a basket," said player-coach Gerry McKissick. "We were missing our top rebounding girl, Jane Pasimeni. Neither team played to its capabilities."

A top 10 in men's flag football was not selected this week. Two of the signs which advertise upcoming intramural events has been stolen, according to Ernie Denny, Intramurals Office manager. "Somebody must have really wanted them, but we'd like them back," he said.

The opening of league play for soccer was Tuesday night. Four of the 16 teams scheduled forfeited. Branches may combine to form an independent team, but all players must be students, Denny said. If teams need coaching help, they may contact soccer Coach Jim Dusara in 258 SFH. Fifty-eight men's teams and 12 women's teams have entered so far. Today is the last day for entries.

Men's church and intramural volleyball entries close today. Coed volleyball entries close Nov. 7. There is a $5 entry for men's and coed volleyball.

NCAA to form new category?

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) - The NCAA may have to create a new statistical category for Jimmy Lisko of Arkansas State University.

Lisko has blocked six punts in seven games and, although the NCAA doesn't keep such records, some teams don't block six punts in seven years.

Lisko is most effective when the Indians rush 10 players - a rush that the Arkansas State coaching staff put together this year.

"I've seen a lot of people get in where they can block a punt and shy off," said defensive coach Mike Malham. "Lisko has the speed and desire. When he gets the opportunity, he will block it."

STUDENT DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION

Yell leaders ask students to cheer

By RICHARD ROMNEY
Assistant Sports Editor

Cheering students can provide BYU with added incentive when the Cougars meet Arizona Saturday, according to the Y's head yell leader and cheerleader.

To encourage students to cheer, a pep rally will be held prior to the Arizona game, at 12:30 p.m. in Cougar Stadium. "Howard Cosell," Cosmo, a gorilla, Gary Shiede, and Jay Miller will all be on hand.

Paul Linford, who was supposed to deliver a pep talk at the rally, will not be able to attend. According to Lynn Grebe, head yell leader, Linford has been called up by the Saskatchewan Rough Riders as they enter the Canadian Football League playoffs.

The crowd can also help spark more action during the first quarter by arriving at the stadium before kickoff and rooting for the players as they warm up. Mary Ann Miller, head cheerleader, said.

Grebe says he agrees with Miss Miller, and hopes that students will wear white and blue for the game as well as attending the rally.

He cited statements from Coach LaVell Edwards and his own past experience to back up his declaration that players are influenced by crowd reaction to their performance.

"Yelling helps," Grebe said. "Most people don't realize how much." At a recent Chalk Talk, Edwards said that "although most players don't act like it, the fans' reaction means a lot to them."

Grebe also noted that the turning point in last year's season was in the game with Wyoming, when Jay Miller had just been hurt, the Cowboys were ahead 7-0 and the team was defeated.

All of a sudden, he said, the fans came alive. "That changed the team's attitude and we were Wyoming apart."

He also said that tailback Jeff Blanc will often talk to him on the sidelines, saying how much the cheering has encouraged the team, or asking why the fans aren't reacting if they seem lethargic.

Miss Miller, noting that BYU usually waits until the second half to come alive, said fans could do a great deal to change that.

"If we'll cheer during warm-ups, the players will start moving the ball right at the beginning of the game," she said.

At the Chalk Talk, Edwards noted how fan participation at Colorado State and Wyoming have always made those schools difficult to play on their home fields.

Miss Miller said Coach Edwards has mentioned the possibility of a bowl game bid for BYU if the season ends 8-3, and that Saturday's game is a must if the Cougars hope for such a record.

At the rally, the pep band will play, plastic footballs and candy will be thrown to the audience, Cosmo and the gorilla will have a unicycle contest, and the "Yell of the Week" winner will be announced.

Yell leader Richard Pelton lifts cheerleader Kay Burningham. Both will be at pep rally Saturday.

Soccer players salute toothpaste commercial

ATHENS (AP) — A Greek and Communist Chinese exhibition soccer match saw more laughs than play here Wednesday when each side mistook a toothpaste advertisement for the other's national anthem.

The incident occurred when the all-star squads of Athens and Canton lined up before an estimated 10,000 fans and suddenly froze to attention as music began blaring from loud speakers. The Greek fans followed suit and rose to their feet in the customary show of respect as the crowd fell silent.

It all broke into roars of laughter as a female voice appealed for the daily use of her brand of toothpaste which gave her added freshness and confidence.

Greek sports officials said later that both the fans and Greek players mistook the toothpaste tune as the Chinese national anthem, because they had never heard it before. Chinese players said they too stood to attention when they saw the Greeks, believing it was the local anthem.

The Greeks won the game, 2-1.

Tickets still available for game with Arizona

All block seating tickets are gone, but, according to Mark Martin, ticket chairman, 1500 tickets will be available on a first-come, first-served basis for Saturday's game against Arizona.

Martin said the block seating tickets were gone by 2:30 Thursday afternoon. He said the other 1500 tickets will be available starting at 8 a.m. Saturday, at the east side of the football stadium.

After the extra tickets are gone, Martin said end zone passes will be given. Martin emphasized that every student who wanted to see the game this Saturday would be able to get in and see it.

Martin said students are encouraged not to stand in line or sleep-out the night before the distribution of the extra tickets.

The extra 1500 tickets, Martin said, are for seats on the north and south sides of the card section.

Former BYU All-American golfer Johnny Miller, now a star on the professional tour, finished the 1975 circuit with $226,118 in official money earnings which was good for only "second place."

The man who finished ahead of Miller was the "Golden Bear," Jack Nicklaus, who compiled $298,149 in 1975 for his seventh money-winning title, according to Professional Golf Association statistics.

Miller won the money title last year with over $346,000 for a new PGA record.

Miller was also named professional golfer of the year last year. Since turning professional, he has donated his earnings each year to the golf program at BYU, and has returned often to Utah to participate in various tournaments.

Y to face Aggies in soccer contest

By RANDY L. SMITH
Universe Sports Writer

Utah State will be out for revenge today when it meets BYU's Soccerats at 4 p.m. on Haws Field.

The Cats defeated the Aggies 5-1 earlier this month in the first round of the BYU Soccer Invitational.

However, Coach Cougar Jim Dursara said Utah State should be stronger in this game. "Their team lacked depth because of injuries last time we met. They also had limited time to practice compared to BYU because of Utah State's later commencement date of classes."

Both teams are members of the Rocky Mountain Soccer League, which has two divisions. One division includes club teams such as at BYU, and the other is composed of NCAA varsity teams. In the club divisions, BYU is now presently No. 1, followed by Colorado, Colorado State and Utah State.

Colorado College is No. 1 in the NCAA varsity division, with Air Force No. 2.

BYU holds a 4-0 record in Rocky Mountain Soccer League club play and a 2-5 record with NCAA teams. The Cats' Utah League record so far this season is 3-1.

Dursara said one promising BYU player this weekend on the halfback line will be Vonn Black, a sophomore in electrical engineering from Claremont, Calif.

Main defensive line players will be Alvin Strait, a senior in physical education from York, Penn., Ron Tate, a sophomore in civil engineering from Winchester, England, and Carlos Amorin, a freshman in computer science from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

NFL ticket sales drop blamed on TV viewing

By TOM SEPPY
Ap Sports Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Thursday National Football League clubs lost more than $9 million in revenues during the 1974 and 1975 seasons as a result of the lifting of the television blackouts on sold-out home games.

Rozelle said a decrease in season ticket sales meant lost revenue of more than $8.4 million, while the remainder of the losses came from game program sales and the value of radio rights.

He also told Congress the antitrust law produced more than 1 million no-shows-ticket purchasers who do not attend last season which, the NFL believes, will result in a decrease in future ticket sales.

In testimony prepared for the House communications subcommittee, Rozelle said season ticket sales by NFL member clubs had shown a steady annual increase prior to 1974, the first year in which the antitrust law went into effect.

Pete Rozelle ... football commissioner

"The number of season ticket sales decreased for the first time in NFL history in the 1974 season, the first season following the enactment of the law," he said. "The trend downward has continued to the 1975 season."

Rozelle said there has been a total decrease of 150,674 season ticket sales since 1973, 55 per cent of the total decrease coming from teams which had regularly-telvised home games during the 1973 and 1974 seasons.

NFL member clubs who televised three or more of their games in 1973 and 1974 accounted for a decline in season ticket sales of $7,908," he said. "The net result is that fully 93 per cent of the decrease in season ticket sales comes from those member clubs who were required to televise some or all of their home games locally during the 1973 and 1974 seasons."

Rep. Torbert H. Macdonald, D-Mass., chairman of the subcommittee, and Rozelle are at odds over the impact of the measure, which Macdonald wants to make permanent. Macdonald said no one has shown that the law has done any damage.

San Francisco hurler cops NL's Rookie of Year honor

NEW YORK (AP) — John "The Count" Montefusco, who not only talked but also played a good game of baseball this year with the San Francisco Giants, was named the National League's Rookie of the Year Thursday.

Because the cocky hurler put his money arm where his mouth was, the Baseball Writers Association of America accorded him top rookie honors ahead of Montreal's brilliant young outfielder-catcher, Gary Carter.

"I really think this is great," said the swarthy, 25-year-old pitcher after learning that he had outscored Carter 12-9 in the voting. "It's the biggest thing that's happened to me in my whole life. I've been shaking for it all year."

"I want to be the best pitcher in the majors and this is the start of it. This caps off the whole year beautifully."

Three other players received one vote each from the 24-man BBWAA board, two from each of the National League cities. They were Montreal third baseman Larry Parrish, second baseman Manny Trillo of the Chicago Cubs and pitcher Rawly Eastwick of the Cincinnati Reds.

As a high school shortstop, Montefusco was ignored in the free agent draft by all 24 major league teams. But he was signed by Giant scout Buddy Kerr following the draft in 1973 and went on to post a 9-2 record at Decatur after Kerr converted him into a pitcher.

After winning 15 games in the minors in 1974, Montefusco joined the Giants late in the season and won three games for them. The hard-throwing right-hander established himself as a strikeout artist in spring training this year and went on to become San Francisco's bread-and-butter pitcher with a 15-9 record and 215 strikeouts.

Goodrich Bowling club contract: selects teams stalemate

LOS ANGELES — Gail Goodrich would like to play for the Los Angeles Lakers and the team's owner, Jack Kent Cooke, would like the guard to play for his team, too. They disagree on just one thing: $100,000.

The 6-foot guard has been suspended by the National Basketball Association team because he hasn't signed his contract for this year. It's a simple matter of money, says a team spokesman.

"They're still miles apart," the spokesman said Wednesday. He said Cooke wasn't budging and neither, apparently, was Goodrich. Asked if Cooke had any comment on the situation, a spokesman said "I don't know. He just left to day for a vacation in Hawaii."

And that's where things stand: still.

The former UCLA guard who led the Lakers in scoring last year was paid about $150,000 for that season. He's asking something near $300,000, although none of the parties involved will discuss accurate figures. Rumors say about all that really separates the men is $100,000.

Last year, Goodrich was the scorer and ball handler of the Laker attack. He set up the plays and could be counted on for 20 points even on his off nights.

Sports clinic gets right date

An announcement on a basketball clinic featuring the BYU basketball team which appeared in Thursday's Daily Universe, contained the incorrect date.

The clinic will be held Nov. 1 instead of today. It will begin at 6 p.m. at the Desert Gym in Salt Lake City, followed by a sports fireside at the Assembly Hall on Temple Square at 8:30 p.m.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

The BYU Bowling Club has announced men's and women's bowling teams.

Hal Brendle and Jeannie Busby were the high of the tournament held last week to determine composition. Brendle is returning from last year along with Craig Madson, Mark Foulger, Steve Sherry Brown, Candace Hannaman, Vicki Kiesig and Huff.

Other members include Renae Ricks, Peggy Rich, Woolf, Bob Tomlinson, Lee Nienjady, Steve O'Leary and Christopher.

The first tournament for the teams is scheduled 15 against Utah State, according to Miss Huff, tournament director. Invitations have also been from Indiana, Kansas City and Washington State.

This year's women's team should be "the best experience," Mr. Hannaman said.

Friday from 7-11 p.m., ASBYU is sponsoring a party with a spook alley and bowling for 40 cents. Anyone who bowls a line with a blue pin gets a free In a continuing tradition, BYU, the University of Weber State will meet Saturday, Nov. 8, at 9 a.m. in tournament at the BYU lanes.

The "Dancing Waters" is a combination of water, electric power, glass, multi-colored lighting effects accompanied by a sound system with a variety of synchronized music on tape, engineering expertise and showmanship. Played like organ to a controlled height, the "Dancing Waters" presents a variety of formations from a "fireworks" display to classical scenes with the "Waters" actually dancing, waltzes, tangos and swirling and swishing in modern intricate dance movements. Breathtaking in beauty.

ke thefts up, Kelshaw says

By LARRY MARTINEZ
Staff Writer

Increased use of the campus has increased number of bikes, of which have been reported the beginning of the year to BYU Security

Chief Robert Kelshaw said the number of missing bikes is increasing and he assumes that many cases go unreported.

He said that last year close to 100 bikes were reported missing and interestingly enough between 30 and 45 bicycles were recovered and never identified by the owner. Kelshaw said this seems to point to the fact that many people never report their missing bicycles.

He said there are some basic precautions that bicyclists should take to reduce chances of losing and never recovering their bicycles.

The best insurance for recovering bicycles is to register them, according to Kelshaw. He said licenses can be purchased from Provo City for $3 and the BYU security office also sells the licenses. He explained that once a license is purchased and the person buys a new bicycle the second license can be purchased at a reduced cost.

Additional parking racks have been placed on campus to accommodate the increased number of bicycles. This year 20 new racks with a 14-bike capacity on each rack were added to the campus, said Kelshaw.

The Security Office would like response from cyclists to see if these racks are meeting the needs of the students. Kelshaw said officers have been monitoring the racks to see how full they are and if they are repeatedly found empty they are moved to more heavily populated areas.

Another important measure the students should take is to chain his bicycle to the rack, said Kelshaw. However, he cautioned students to not chain them to undesignated areas, or they will be given $1 citations and removed, if unregistered.

Kelshaw urged bicyclists to obey all traffic regulations, and said he would much rather see students come to campus on bicycles than in cars, but outlined a few precautions for cyclists.

He said many people are riding bikes on sidewalks that are not designated as bike paths and are creating a hazard to pedestrians. A number of complaints have been received concerning this problem, he explained. He added that a $2.50 fine will be issued for violation.

More personal injuries from bicycles occurred during the first week of school this year than all of last year, said Kelshaw, and most of the accidents happened on the ramps, with students often losing control when exceeding the speed limit.

He urged cyclists to properly display head and tail lights and to refrain from running red lights and stop signs.

Cycle tips for winter elaborated

By LARRY CRAGUN
Universe Staff Writer

With winter weather approaching many students put their bikes in storage until spring. But to those who use their bikes for basic transportation year-round, here are some suggestions for keeping it in good repair.

"Winter weather is the hardest thing that can happen to a bike," said Steve McAfee and Dave Bowen of Campus Cycle. They suggest that getting it out of the elements can save years of unnecessary wear. They realize everyone can't do this, so if you can't bring it inside, they suggest oiling the brake gear cables and chain and then covering the bike with a tarp to keep water off.

Roy Kelshaw of Roy's Cycle, in Provo, said that good care of bikes in winter is "especially important." He advised using a No. 10 oil or lighter when oiling brakes. He cautioned against using "3 in 1" oil and automobile oil. He said that "3 in 1" oil is not made for bikes and has been known to rust," and added, "What seems to happen with heavy automotive oil is that it picks up road dirt and gums things up."

Spiro Duvelas, from Bike and Hike, suggests getting bikes tuned up for winter. This includes oiling the chain, cluster gears, derailleurs, shift levers and even the pedals. He further suggested getting brakes adjusted to their peak for wet riding, tightening cables and putting on some fenders.

Kelson advised avoiding chuck holes with a passion. He said the bent bike rims can be one of the most dangerous things when riding in winter. Tires pop more easily and stopping with hand brakes is more difficult, he added.

Students recruited for BYU

By STAN HARRISON
Universe Staff Writer

Active recruitment of students for BYU was pushed under the direction of former BYU Pres. Franklin S. Harris, and later extended under Pres. Ernest L. Wilkinson.

According to Dr. Oliver R. Smith, one of the faculty members who contacted prospective BYU students during the summer of 1939 and 1940, Pres. Harris formulated a systematic way to send word about BYU to prospective LDS students in various states in the western states.

This was done by selected faculty members who traveled to various areas when they were not assigned to teaching summer classes.

Pres. Wilkinson in the early 1950's revived and extended the recruiting effort on a church-wide basis.

With the permission of the general authorities, 20 to 30 faculty members would be assigned to give short talks about BYU at state conferences across the nation, meeting with interested students and their parents afterwards.

"Their appearance at state conferences would help them (prospective students) feel BYU belonged to them," said Smith. In addition, this gave prospective students an opportunity to talk with a school representative.

The program, however, lasted just a few years. According to Pres. Wilkinson, it was successful and soon resulted in sufficient enrollment so that the program was no longer needed.

Increasing responsibility for the recruiting of students was given to the Alumni Association by Pres. Wilkinson in February of 1956.

BYU alumni, according to the Alumni Board minutes of Feb. 8, 1956, "can do a lot to help influence these students into considering BYU."

The Alumni Association delegated the responsibility given them by Pres. Wilkinson to alumni who were appointed as state coordinators. These coordinators located top LDS students and urged them to attend BYU.

Coordinators were sought who: 1, were BYU graduates within the previous 12 years; 2, were respected by the youth of their state; 3, had strong, positive feelings toward BYU and 4, had spouses that also had attended BYU.

"Now the problem was no longer a need for students as much as it was to restrict enrollment and to select only top scholars and athletes."

The stake president would be informed of the program by a letter from the Alumni Association. Later, a second letter with a short list of eligible members in his state would be sent, asking him for a recommendation.

Upon acceptance, the Alumni Association sent a formal letter of appointment to the individual, and stake president would announce the appointment to bishops and briefly explain the program.

Mission presidents were asked to appoint between one and four coordinators, depending on the size of the mission.

Growth was planned for BYU and other schools under the supervision of the LDS Church.

At the Faculty Workshop of BYU on Sept. 21, 1959, Pres. Wilkinson said, "If, as is hoped, the percentage of LDS students who will attend Brigham Young University or other church colleges will increase to, say 40 per cent, then we need to be planning to accommodate by the year 2000, either on the Provo campus or at branch institutions, over 200,000 students."

According to Pres. Wilkinson, at that time it was contemplated that there would be a large increase in the number of students. He said that the Board of Trustees then was in favor of junior colleges. All state coordinators became known in 1967 as admissions advisers, and were given the responsibility of guiding those who lacked the necessary academic potential to other schools with good institutional programs.

In addition, their function was to inform high school students in each state, of BYU's educational opportunities and to steer top students to BYU.

The advisers were contacted twice yearly, provided with manuals and other BYU literature appropriate to their callings, and held annual conferences in Aspen Grove, Utah, at the expense of the Alumni Association.

In early 1967, President N. Eldon Tanner of the First Presidency announced that the church would no longer be able to maintain the university financially as it had in the past.

"We cannot," he said, "continue to extend the university, if it is to be extended, through tithing funds."

"Now the problem was no longer a need for students as much as it was to restrict enrollment and to select only top scholars and athletes," according to "The History of the Alumni Association and Its Influence on the Development of BYU."

As of January of 1968, 22,138 students were enrolled at BYU, and the Board of Trustees authorized BYU to enroll an additional 4,000 students in May of that year.

By January of 1969, 350 of 473 stakes had admissions advisers.

Large enrollment began to be a problem for BYU in the early 1970s, and in January the First Presidency sent letters to all wards and branches announcing an enrollment ceiling of 25,000.

The letter said that with the rapid growth of the church throughout the world we cannot expect to provide secular education for all our youth, but we shall do all feasible to provide facilities for spiritual training.

"Enrollment at this institution has now reached approximately 25,000, and it is felt that we should not exceed this figure," The First Presidency added, "...enlarging enrollments cannot continue there without limitation."

The letter from the First Presidency suggested that bishops and branch presidents advise prospective students that wherever possible they "attend school in their own communities, particularly during their freshman and sophomore years."

The new policy allowed that only 4,200 new students be admitted to BYU for the 1970 to 1971 school year.

Special consideration for admission to BYU was given to students who had applied for and received a scholarship or been given an award.

Faculty helps to find books for Y library

By LOIS KOHLER
Universe Staff Writer

Acquiring books and materials for the Harold B. Lee Library requires the cooperation of many library staff and faculty members.

Students have input into the purchasing of new books, but their recommendations mainly go through faculty members, said Dean Larsen, acquisitions librarian.

Because of divergent interests within academic departments and inter-department studies, a faculty or a subject librarian may be assigned to coordinate acquisitions, said Larsen.

"We consider every faculty member part of the selection team," he said.

Other individuals, such as a bibliography librarian, may also participate in the acquisition process, he said.

Most new books are pre-selected through the faculty, Larsen said.

The library published a contract-subject profile which lists wanted books. The profile contains descriptions of information which the kind of particular subject is looking for. Larsen, Profiles various firms and if a firm has a book in print, it will fill the library's need. The book to the library and the book it will be returned.

The Provo Region of Young Adults is sponsoring a Halloween party tonight open to BYU students.

The party will be held from 7:30 p.m. to midnight at the Provo Third Ward Chapel, 500 N. 100 North.

Featured at the party will be a horror house and a spook alley.

Archaeologists describe discoveries

An ancient fortress in Southern Mexico with a moat around it and an associated system of canals and reservoirs was described Wednesday during the second day of a BYU archaeology symposium.

The difficulties involved in mapping the area covered by the unusual hydraulic system were described by Dr. Kay T. Matheny, BYU associate professor of anthropology and archaeology.

Pierre Agnir, archaeologist for Dr. Matheny, New World Archaeological Foundation, followed Dr. Matheny with a paper on similarities between the ancient civilization of central Chiapas in Southern Mexico and the Teotihuacan culture in the Mexican central highlands.

Included in the hydraulic system discovered in the southern state of Campeche in Mexico were the canals, numerous ponds of water which were modified and made into reservoirs to hold water, and some cisterns which were also used to hold water.

The moated fortress found is very large and completely surrounded by water, according to Dr. Matheny. He compared it to a nearby town which is only two meters larger in size than the fortress.

Using slides, Dr. Matheny discussed the method of infrared aerial photography used to map the area. Without the photography the mapping of the system would have been very difficult because of the dense thorn-forest vegetation.

The Campeche site also includes some temples and other ruins.

Dr. Matheny also discussed the vegetation, soil and animal life of the area, the difficulties of working in dense brush and insects and diseases encountered by foundation members.

Bach, in his presentation on Teotihuacan-style elements in the civilization of central Chiapas, Mexico, showed slides of Teotihuacan-type pottery found in Chiapas.

standards low and I really don't think any further explanation is necessary.

Switching to the men, the main problem is hair. Very few ears are totally visible, as they should be. In one of my classes the hair completely covers the ears of two individuals. Returned missionaries are especially bad, I would have expected them to keep their hair short and live by their mission standards, but that is not to be apparently. Brother Pinegar's words fell on deaf ears in the last twelve stake fireside when he called the missionaries to return to their mission grooming standards. Do they listen only to what they want to hear?

What about the freshmen and those students who are preparing to go on missions?

Does their hair meet standards? In most cases it does not. It's going to have to be cut when they go on missions, so why not now and save yourself from sinning.

Is sinning too strong a word? I think not. When we came to BYU we signed a pledge saying that we would obey the dress and grooming standards. To violate that pledge is a sin. Also, our general authorities tell us to obey the grooming code. Are they wrong?

Last of all I'd like to say that if you cannot keep the simplest of rules here in Mormon Valley, how do you ever expect to live up to the standards necessary to obtain the Celestial Kingdom?

Club apologizes

Editor:

As members of the Sportsmen Club, we would like to take this opportunity to respond to the two letters published in last Friday's Universe concerning our organization. On behalf of the club, we would like to sincerely apologize to those people who were offended by our organization. On behalf of the club, we would like to sincerely apologize to those people who were offended by our organization. On behalf of the club, we would like to sincerely apologize to those people who were offended by our organization.

However, we feel our actions were misrepresented. The activity was intended to be embarrassing for the pledges, not the passersby. The ratings given were not based on physical appearance, as stated in letters referring to our organization in Friday's paper. It was not a serious attempt to rate anyone by any criteria. It was a simple joke done in a spirit of fun.

Sportsmen is not your "average college fraternity" or a "non-LDS type organization" as Thomas Cavanaugh suggested. First, we are not a fraternity, but a sports club that is bettering our members physically. We are currently rated first in all-school in the intramural competitions. Second, we are dedicated to developing our members spiritually. We frequently sponsor firesides and service projects with a high percentage of the members in attendance, most of whom are returned missionaries and men of high moral character and praiseworthy achievements.

Third, we stress the development of our members socially by well-planned group activities with many of the women's organizations on campus. In these ways we are helping BYU to develop the whole man.

We again express our sincere and heartfelt apology to all those who were personally or indirectly offended by our actions.

Since they do go as far as naming their first four children before they are married, they are only concerned with themselves. A lot of BYU girls have a very immature vocabulary of words that come across very clear. They probably have the mistaken belief that they can smell nice, get good grades and attend church and get to where they want to exist. I don't like to be a judge, because I don't get very good opportunities to date. I also very strongly dislike living in an unhealthy environment that is very difficult to escape. I wonder if girls are really as intelligent as they could be. They are afraid to show or make apparent what they feel and think it is taboo to flirt. Any girl who is looking to find out about a guy through hearsay is working at a lost cause. A girl who spends her socializing time trying to psycho analyze a person I don't get very good opportunities to date.

Tell me what is wrong with luring a man or two for a date or three and then finally getting married to the one you want.

A lot of Latter-day Saints probably believe that they will be introduced to their mate in church, meet them in church, or be introduced by a friend. If I depended on that and if anyone else does, I'm sure they will not get married and I'm sure I will not get married.

government and the student body is a sorrowful and unnecessary bifurcation of leadership, talent, ideas and interests. Church leaders have continually counselled us to become involved in public

I propose we join forces with the ASBYU student

ASBYU lauded

Editor:

I congratulate ASBYU Pres. Bob Henrie, and the executive council on their sincere and selfless efforts to bring student government down to the student level. This year we are experiencing an obvious and definite move from the cubby holes and executive council room of the third and fourth floors of the ELWC to the ground floor where the students are.

More specifically I commend the present trend of informing the student body on issues and campus activity and management of student problems through student forums twice a month, the focus page in the Universe, the new Organizations Review Board, the appointment of a student representative to the city commission and the overall exhibition of a positive, productive attitude.

"Student government is going places" but is the student body? There's an overwhelming need for BYU students to, if not become actively involved in student government, to at least be aware of what is happening. Oligarchy at BYU (of all places) is in the very last expression of disgust a flagrant abomination.

OPINION—COMMENT

Brigham Young University

City government stil needs Y input

A student body representative has been appointed to Provo to act as a liaison between the BYU President's Office and the ASBYU Executive Council. It would be hoped that the students so involved, as well as the student body generally, would show an interest in what work he performs.

Complaints have been heard, heeringly for time immemorial, that the city government pays no attention to the needs and wishes of the students. Some city officials have come to feel the student's don't really care. This has been as through lack of student attendance at city government meeting on occasions when student interests were involved.

The new representatives will have various duties, among them the task of becoming familiar with each of the departments in city government in order to better understand civic operations. He also will be meeting with the mayor and city commission on a regular basis. In addition, he will be expected to directly represent to the ASBYU President's office, and will be responsible for spearheading organization of an annual "Provo City Day" on campus.

While the representative will have a specified seat at the Provo city council meetings, he will have no vote. Even so, this will mean that a direct line will exist between student and administrative officials at BYU and Provo city officials, officials serving the city in which most BYU students live.

It would be hoped that, with the help of this representative, a minimum of problems would arise and that they could quickly ironed out.

This cannot be an end, however, to bettering relations between BYU and Provo, for BYU is students, and the students are not directly represented by the city representative. It is up to the individual students themselves to take an interest in their city government, whether it be Provo's, Orem's, or whatever their place of residence.

Utah Valley is home—whether permanent or while students are at school, but in either case, all are influenced by what the respective governing boards do. And rather than just complain, become informed, take a responsible stand, and do what is felt necessary to end the complaints.

Court facing decision on life, death definition

The phrase "a matter of life and death" is one which is often bantered around lightly, in connection with everything from buying a new dress to getting Mag wheels for the '57 Chev. But for Karen Ann Quinlan, the 21-year-old girl now lying in a coma in New Jersey, the phrase is literally as important as it sounds.

On Monday, Oct. 20, the New Jersey Supreme Court heard the opening arguments in the case involving Karen Ann Quinlan and suffering from "irreversible brain damage" as a result of ingesting a deadly combination of drugs and alcohol last April, and her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quinlan.

The parents argue that the state's refusal to allow them to shut down Karen's artificial respiration and circulation is a violation not only of Karen's right to "pass on to a better life" but also her right to die in dignity.

Medical evidence indicates that electrical brain activity is minimal, and that Karen has no chance of a normal recovery. The parents maintain that it was Karen's express wish not to be kept alive artificially and that their suit is simply an attempt to honor this desire.

It is obvious that the legal profession has failed to keep pace with the medical profession with respect to a definition of death or life. Only recently has the medical definition of death shifted from a heart that no longer beats, or lungs that no longer draw a breath, to a "state of minimal electrical activity of the brain." Yet the redefinition has not been accompanied by needed legal restructuring or redefinition.

The decision to be handed down by the New Jersey Supreme Court will undoubtedly have extensive ramifications. It will be expected to take into consideration the qualitative aspects of human life: the dignity and human consciousness of living. It will of necessity be forced to consider the drain, both financial and emotional, on the family of a person in a comatose or vegetable state and what rights these people have. It must eventually come to grips with a moral, if not entirely legal, question, of why a person in a state of "minimal brain activity" should be kept alive. Ultimately, such a ruling will also affect present abortion laws which allow a woman to undergo an abortion on a fetus up to six months of age when infants born prematurely at this time may often be saved since they manifest all necessary life-support functions.

Life is a very precious commodity, many will say. But people define life in different ways. Some life sustained by artificial machines and drugs is not life at all, for the enjoyment factor is missing. Others maintain that as long as a breath is drawn, life should and must be preserved, no matter the cost. Others, such as Karen Ann Quinlan's parents, find the promise of life after death brighter than the promise of "living death" for both Karen and the remaining members of her family.

Although one of the first legal decisions concerning the distinction between life and death is just now being made, the responsibility for what is life to them? I can't believe in this area cannot be shifted to the courts. Perhaps the test case, it seems to me, is not what life is to them? When does life begin and when does it end? Has a family the right to decide this question for themselves, or must this right be solely that of the individual?

It is hoped that the New Jersey Supreme Court decision is just one in a series of soul-searching resolutions made on the issue.

Title IX controversy covers women's sports

As required by statute, President Ford on May 27 signed the final regulations necessary to implement fully Title IX (Prohibition of Sex Discrimination) of the Educational Amendments of 1972.

Title IX proscription of discrimination on the basis of sex reads in pertinent part as follows:

No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance.

The regulations impose new controls on the educational system in all of the following areas: Student financial aid; Admissions; Housing, both on and off campus; Admissions and recruitment; Student qualifications; Athletics; plus other areas which are under question or are to be defined more fully by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW).

Termination of Federal grant and contract funds will result if institutions do not comply to Title IX rules as established by the Department of HEW.

One section of Title IX which is bringing some havoc, some uneasiness, and a touch of paranoia to the nation's schools is the law forbidding sex discrimination in athletics. Its impact on the progress of women's sports programs is a major one.

where there is "interest and about sport, a school must form a women's team." According to HEW officials, "if, for example, enough women are able to play basketball, even football, the school must start a team."

If there is not enough interest in women's team in a particular sport, HEW officials say, the school must be allowed to try out for team—but only in such noncontact sports as swimming, archery or track and field. If there is a debate on baseball, women's tennis, tennis, and noncontact sport. Basketball is sport.

If a school wants, it may permit to try out for the men's team in sport, but the school is not required to do so.

HEW stresses that equal spending and women's sports is not required groups like the NCAA fear that equal spending will practically eliminate women's sports.

However and whenever all this is resolved, (Title IX regulations) are being challenged (by groups) women's athletic director stated, sports is not an issue which is under the carpet next year. I stay.

Opinions aired on religion, Word of Wisdom

Editor's note: A recurring problem is the student who signs a false name when signing the letter to the editor. Some of these students, when contacted by phone or in person claim this to be their real name when in fact it is not. When it can be determined from the content of the letter that the person is a student but then is found not to be registered at the university, the letter is not published on the assumption that the name is a false one. All names on letters published are verified. University standards have reported that such deceit, such as using a false name, is in violation of the honor code and students should be expelled. It is decided that they have agreed to uphold that code.

Word of wisdom

Editor: The problems of the student next door to me, and many others like him, are the cause of great concern. My student neighbor is the finest I have ever met, and it is a tragedy that he cannot find others who understand the Word of Wisdom as Dr. and Sister Widstoe taught it. I'm sure there are many students who want good food instead of the meats, sugar, white flour and coke or soft drink diets of most students. If such students are given each other, they could live together and have their own socials and banquets, instead of either having to refuse food or stay away from groups where they know that illness-producing foods are going to be served.

Our church magazines publish many recipes that are loaded with sugar, in spite of the fact that they have written against it. Sister Widstoe said that sugar destroys calcium in bones and teeth, and a lack of calcium causes nervous breakdowns.

May I suggest that students and faculty who believe in Dr. Widstoe's views on nutrition organize a group where they can meet each other. Eating causes so much conflict and illness, and Sister Widstoe says it is the cause of many divorces.

—Ruth Perry Provo

Freedom of press

Editor: I doubt if anyone believes that there is freedom of the press at BYU. Nobody, I think, would dare do. The paper attempts to appear objective on political issues, but when has there been an editorial denouncing an administration policy? When was the last time Pres. Oaks was ripped apart in print or published on the assumption that the name is a false one. All names on letters published are verified. University standards have reported that such deceit, such as using a false name, is in violation of the honor code and students should be expelled. It is decided that they have agreed to uphold that code.

It is an American tradition that the news media can be a force to denounce the president without reducing respect for his office. If this were not so, our very liberties would be in jeopardy. How much more important in this college community is healthy disagreement. Unless some dialogue on university policy is generated, the administration is encouraged to be complacent and conservative. And where is this dialogue going to be generated? Only in the student newspaper.

If the paper were really interested in teaching how to run a newspaper, it would have investigative reporters uncovering the poor management of university and student body funds, the childish approach to campus entertainment and the poor mismanagement of the press. If the administration is encouraged to be complacent and conservative. And where is this dialogue going to be generated? Only in the student newspaper.

Rehab helps

Editor: Having read the articles on Vocational Rehabilitation and the disabled students here at the Y in the Monday Magazine of October 27, I thought I would write and give your readers an insight into a little known, very misunderstood handicap. I am talking about speech handicaps—stuttering, the inability to pronounce certain sounds, and others.

I have had speech therapy for the past 14 years—ever since I was four-years-old when my parents realized my speech was not baby talk that I was taking to specialists then and I have been to many since. To this day they do not know what caused my speech problem. As a result, I couldn't say my own name correctly until I was about six or seven years old. As a Christmas present for my parents that year I read a poem that had all the 's', 'th's', 'ch's', and 'z's' underlined—saying the sounds right. That Christmas was one of the happiest days in my life.

I had a very unhappy childhood as a result of my speech. I was an open target for teasing. People can be very unkind—especially in repeating your speech in humiliating manner. Most of the time they don't even realize what they're doing but I know.

I have been lucky here at BYU. After 14 years of therapy, I don't have that word of a problem anymore. I have many people just think I have a funny accent. Now and then I have to repeat a word to make myself understood, but so far everyone has been kind about it.

I, too, am under Vocational Rehab. At first I felt a little guilty about that as though I am legally classified as handicapped. I never considered myself such. I have never let my speech stop me from doing anything. But I realized I have to work hard. There are some occupations I could never go into. My rehab counselor helped me realize that. The whole program has helped me realize my potential. It has also helped me to accept my speech as it is and realize that I am still a whole person. (When I first found out I was classified as handicapped I couldn't accept it.)

every person there's a difference. I would have had parents that didn't realize I had a problem so early. My speech might not have been as good as it is corrected. So many things could have happened. I am so lucky.

Reply to letter

Editor: Doctor Palmeri's letter to the editor in Friday's Oct. 24 Universe has aroused my interest and motivated me to reply. I'm not sure however that I know exactly what the doctor was trying to say. He quoted verses 12 and 13 of Sec. 89 of the D&C with no words of explanation of his own. These verses deal with the eating of meat and the Lord's advice that meat be eaten only in times of winter, or of cold, or of famine. The letter was, however, addressed to all duck and deer hunters and not to all those who eat meat. I am taking the liberty, therefore, to assume that Dr. Palmeri was suggesting that hunters are out of harmony with the Lord's teachings on this subject.

The Lord in verse 12 of the section explains that the flesh of beasts is ordained for the use of man with thanksgiving. His advice that meat be eaten only in times of winter or of cold, or of famine, is a nutritionally sound advice. Indeed we are often admonished in the church to use moderation in all things. The issue here is the eating of meat and not hunting. Hunting is simply a means of obtaining meat, which is objectionable to some, certainly is not morally wrong.

In Sec. 49 I believe the Lord is talking about hunting because of his warning, "... we be unman that sheddeth blood or that wasteth flesh and hath no need." In this section it is explained that, "... the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and the which cometh of the earth, is ordained for the use of man for food and for raiment and that he might have an abundance." Also in this section it says that those who promote the doctrine that man should not eat meat are not ordained of God.

The scriptures seem to indicate that in a spirit of love, and not out of anger or bitterness. We are among the most fortunate people on earth. We are a great and a peculiar people. Let us show our gratitude, and demonstrate this greatness by our actions.

—Michael Jay Bennion Cody, Wyo.

Agrees with term

Editor: I just read a letter expressing the opinion that "Sportsmen are clods." While I might phrase my opinion differently, my experience with the Sportsmen leads me to the same conclusion. While I was studying in the library the other day, a group of Sportsmen (easily identified by the name of their shirts) sat down at the next table. They talked and joked so loudly about their activities and exploits that I finally moved to another table rather than waste energy screening out the Sportsmen's attempts to share their boisterousness with others.

People do things in groups they wouldn't do alone, so I agree there might be some merit in doing away with groups that apparently encourage behavior that is detrimental to both those who do it and those who must experience it against their will.

Election info

Editor: Your editorial of October 3, entitled "Student vote in Provo election," was excellent. It stated "study the platforms and get out and vote." Yet, as a paper, the Daily Universe failed to help its readers become better informed by its negligence in reporting the issues and candidates' platforms.

The editorial outlined the qualifications that a Provo resident needed in order to become a registered voter of Utah, yet nowhere in the Daily Universe up to October 7, Provo's Primary Election day, were the places the times of registration, or the voting printed. As far as other articles about the candidates were concerned, there was one article on county auditor and four on county

Letters discussed

Editor: In the past months since coming to BYU, I have observed, with great interest, the various articles offered in the Universe. I have taken particular notice of the letters to the editor section, and after several months of scrutiny, I would like to express my appreciation to the University staff, and to those who see fit to share their feelings and ideas in letters to the editor.

A wise man once said, "I disagree with what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it." I feel much the same way. I can't often that I take issue with statements made by those who write letters to the editor, but I respect their conviction that causes them to write. I realize, also, that every man's honest opinion is a good one.

With these things in mind, then, may I make a few comments? First, may I say that I am very grateful for your congratulations. In my judgment, your fair treatment of writers of all opinions is most noteworthy. Secondly, to those who write letters to the editor, may I say, I have great respect for you and your right to think and say what you will. Only commissioner candidates. There were a total of 13 men running for the two offices. Freedom of the press is guaranteed under the First Amendment of the Constitution, but this law is imprecise and the limits are not well defined. On the other hand, Section IV of the Code of Ethics of Journalism suggests that there ought to be truthfulness and accuracy in the printing of news. How can this be when complete information is not given?

Don't get me wrong—the Daily Universe is about the best college student paper published, but in my opinion, better discretion could be used by those printing the news, so that each political candidate is fairly and equally represented.

I suggest, therefore, that the Daily Universe provide a more informative look at the candidates and to the future. In the students will be a more effective they vote.

My body is still on Daylight Saving Time. But my problems aren't nearly the magnitude to face some BYU employees when the clocks move forward or back.

I still begin to droop after 9 p.m. because my body time. I still get a bit queasy on my stomach. I think I have surely overslept because of daylight pouring out of the sky.

The problems are minor ones, though, compared to facing some members of the Force Services, who are trying to explain some of the hours those people work to an irrational physicist on marching to the tick of its own distant time. Even worse, trying explaining the time change to more than 300 cows that demand to be milked hours—no matter what.

This is the twice-a-year task that faces the herd at BYU Farm in Spanish Fork.

Asst. Herdsman Brent Platt said the time change throws the cows off schedule, but they adjust in days. They adjust faster than I do, if it only takes three or four days.

Platt said the most noticeable effect is the drop in the average milk production for each cow as they are adjusting.

Cows at the BYU farm are milked at 12:30 p.m. When the clocks are turned back, the first day they come an hour later than usual.

The cows are then milked again 12 hours according to Platt, each gives about one and one-half gallons of milk less than it normally gives.

Within a couple of days, the average production of milk is back to normal—about 42 to 43 pounds a day. Platt said there are 320 cows being milked at the farm and about 650 animals in the herd.

Platt said that there is a lot of extra milk when the cows are waiting to be milked during the day the clock is turned back.

I like the extra hour of sleep in the fall, but the cows moaning in the evening until my body can
